WA-I-336

19th Century

Kershner-Burkholder Farm

Huyetts Vicinity

private

This two story, three bay stone house, frame bank barn and outbuildings provide an example of a 19th century Washington County farm group. The type of masonry displayed in construction of the house, its exterior woodwork and general form all suggest that it was built during the second quarter of the 19th century. Constructed of native limestone, the house reflects prominent regional traditions. Most stone houses in Washington County date from before 1850. An old road near the house which is said to have been a route to nearby Salem Church as reflecting early transportation patterns in the County.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This farm complex is located at the end of a long private lane which extends in a northerly direction from U.S. Route 40 at its junction with Maryland Route 144 about three miles west of Hagerstown in Washington County. The house and barn are situated on moderately level limestone ground with the house facing south and the barn east.

The house is a two story, three bay limestone structure with a two story, two bay ell extending to the rear or north. A two story porch is constructed along the east facade of the ell and a two story frame addition is attached to its northeast corner. The walls are built of roughly coursed local limestone. No decorative masonry is associated with the exterior of the building.

Most windows and doors are aligned with each other in the walls. They have narrow casings finished with a bead at the inside edge. Main story windows at the front elevation have nine pane upper sashes over single pane lower sashes. In other windows six over six pane sashes are used. Hinge pins in the frames indicate that shutters were present at one time.

The main entrance is located in the east end bay of the front elevation. A transom with diamond shaped panes is framed above the door. Extending across the front elevation is a hipped roof porch supported by round pillars. It would appear to date from the early 20th century.

The roof of the building is sheathed with modern asphalt shingles and extends beyond the gable walls. Brick chimneys are located inside the end walls. Behind the house is a smokehouse with a steeply pitched hip roof. Other small frame outbuildings are located nearby. The barn stands south of the house and is of frame construction resting on fieldstone foundations. Its roof is topped with decorative metal ventilators.

Extending in a northerly direction from the barn, passing east of the house is a lane which is said to have been an old road leading to Salem Church, located about three miles north of the farm.

The buildings appear to be in good to excellent condition and stand on a tract containing 241.63 acres.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This two story, three bay stone house, frame bank barn and outbuildings provide an example of a 19th century Washington County farm group. The type of masonry displayed in construction of the house, its exterior woodwork and general form all suggest that it was built during the second quarter of the 19th century. Constructed of native limestone, the house reflects prominent regional traditions. Most stone houses in Washington County date from before 1850. An old road near the house which is said to have been a route to nearby Salem Church is important as reflecting early transportation patterns in the County.

During much of the last half of the 18th century this farm was owned by members of the Kershner family. During much of the second half of the 19th century it was owned by Joseph H. Troup. The property includes parts of the land grants "Resurvey on David's First Shift", "Amendment on Hager's Delight", "Widow's Last Shift", "Wolf's Purchase", "Bachelor's Delight", "Resurvey on Contentment" and "Addition to Dutch Folly."
